SALT LAKE MAN READS THE DICTIONARY DAY AFTER DAY

ANY peculier people, with all manner of idiosyncrasics may be seen daily in the free public be seen daily in the free public Million Dollar little peculiarities are not apparent to the causual observer, but to the young lady attendants in the library readingroom these "freaks," as they have come to term them, are a daily source of amusement. The life of an attendant | Fire Destroys Seven Big Freight in a library is not as pleasant as it might be. They must wait upon all sorts of people; grouchy old men and women and giddy young people who never know just what they want. The life becomes more or less of a grind, and it is the freaks that tend to break

"Our library freaks?" said one of the young ladies. "Oh, yes, we couldn't get esting one. I suppose, is the man who always takes off his shoes in the read-ing-room. He has been coming for months, and you might think we ought to be used to him by this time; but we are not. It is all we can do when he enters the room to refrain from laughing outright. After selecting a magazine or a book, he sits down in the chair yonder, and it is his inevitable custom to remove his shoes and place them un-der the next seat. He reads for hours, and then putting on his shoes walks quietly out, never looking to the right or left nor speaking to any one."

Sits Turkish Fashion.

"Another freak," said another of the young ladies, "is the man who sits Turkish fashion in the window. He must be a tailor, I imagine, for he almust be a tailor, I imagine, for he al-ways sits upon his feet. The chairs are not large enough for him, and if he carnot find an empty bench he sits over there on the window sill. And then, there is the man who wears his glasses on his ear. After securing a book and acttling himself in one of the big chairs, he never falls to take his glasses from his nose and hang them on one ear while he-treads or looks at the pictures in the book. He has not the pictures in the book. He has not been in for some time, and I was told yesterday that he is serving a sentence Studies the Dictionary.

"Oh, we haven't told him about the old man who is reading the dictionary. Yes, he's reading the big Standard Dictionary there. My, but that is an undertaking! He's been at it more than a month now and he's only over to page 600 and something. But then he has accomplished some feats nearly as event as that He first read Convert. great as that. He first read Conventions and Treaties of the United States Government. Although it is a report and must surely be dry, he read it through from beginning to end—and it is a large book, too.

Read Cram's Atlas.

"This man next read Cram's Atlas of the World, Ancient and Modern. He was months reading this book. It contains $55 pages, and they are twelve by fifteen inches. My, but he must be storing his mind with lots of information. He comes in nearly every day. rather late in the morning, and reads until about noon. After lunch he comes back again and remains until dinner back again and remains until dinner time, and then be usually spends a few hours here in the evening. Yes, he rends the dictionary on the stand. He used to take it out, but as many peo-ple often refer to it, Miss Sprague had to request him not to take the book away. He draws a chair up close to the stand and buries his nose in the words and their definitions for hours and hours each day."

Source of Perplexity.

A source of Perplexity as well as amusement are the people who come in for a book and have no idea what they want. Frequently women walk up to the desk and say: "Will you please give me that little red book; you know, the one I had three weeks ago. It was about this size," and then they illustrate with their hands the probable leigth and width of the book they are seeking. These people are nearly as seeking. These people are nearly as annoying as the person who wanted "To Have and to Hold," and asked for "What You've Got and How to Keep It," or another who wanted "Ben Hur" and asked for "Tom She,"

Pigs in Cabbage Patch.

Miss Sprague, the librarian, was caught the other day by a little boy who asked for "The Satin Wood-Box." It was simply the misplacing of the hyphen that made the title unfamiliar. hyphen that made the title unfamiliar. What the youngster wanted was "The Sattn-Wood Box." Another asked for the "Pillet." who wanted "The Pilot." The attendants are all familiar with the title "The Last of the Moccasins" for "The Last of the Mohicans." But the title that is most pitifully mutilated is "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." Those behind the counters, however, know what is desired whether "The Pigs in the Cabbage Field" or some other equally ridiculous title is given.

Limbs.

HICAGO, MAY 30.-Crazed by rheumatic pains, Gustav Rolburg, 72 years old, endeavored to amputate his left foot to relieve himself of pain.

As the old man sat on the floor in his home and began his operation, his wife, who is helpless from paralysis, wife, who is helpiess from paralysis, looked on from her chair within a few feet of him. Her screams attracted two polleemen who rushed into the house and took the knife from Rolburg. He had severed an artery and by the time he arrived at the county hospital was so weak it is thought he cannot survive.

Bright's Disease and Diabetes News.

Law Offices of Henley & Costello, San Francisco, May 23, 1904.

To the legal profession of Salt Lake: I was a witness to the following About two years ago Prof. Yost of Palo Alto, who was in an extreme condition, due to advanced Bright's disease, came to my office. He was attended by his physician, who was himself a victim of diabetes. The object of the visit was to meet a prominent business man who had for months been investigating an alleged cure for Bright's disease and diabetes, and hear his verdict. He de-clared that the claims were fully proven and that the cure had been discovered. Both Prof. Yost and his physician at once adopted the treatment. Within six months both were so well along toward recovery that they considered them-selves beyond danger, and at this date selves beyond danger, and at this date neither Bright's disease nor diabetes holds any terrors for them, and the physician is successfully using the treatment in his practice.

Learning that my old law partner, Judge R. R. Bigelow, for many years Chief Justice of the State of Nevada, had Bright's disease and that, though he had four or five of our best physicians, yet that he had had to give up practice and was in a serious condition. practice and was in a serious condition I lost no time in telling him of the above. It resul ed in his complete re-covery and he is again back to active practice. As to the curability of chron-ic Bright's disease and diabetes I have no more doubt about it than that I am licing.
